

ILM Plagiarism and Duplicate Publication Policy

Plagiarism (unattributed use of large portions of text and/or data) is not acceptable in manuscripts submitted to Issues in Law and Medicine.

Authors will be contacted with the details of the allegation of plagiarism and if the content cannot be corrected to the satisfaction of the editors of Issues in Law and Medicine, then manuscripts may be withdrawn from peer review, and published papers may be subject to retraction.

Duplicate publication of identical text or data is a violation of copyright and may involve civil penalties for copyright infringement, published notification of duplication and/or retraction of the duplicated paper at the discretion of the editors of Issues in Law and Medicine.
